

Pharmacy Naloxone Survey

What is your gender?

Number of responses: 17

What is your age?

Number of responses: 17

About how many years have you been a pharmacist?

Number of responses: 17

Have you personally used or seen someone else use naloxone?

Number of responses: 17

I feel comfortable counseling on naloxone.

Number of responses: 17

I feel my consultation on naloxone is valuable.

Number of responses: 17

I feel that I have adequate time to counsel on naloxone.

Number of responses: 17

I feel comfortable recommending naloxone to patients.

Number of responses: 17

I have access to adequate resources on information regarding naloxone and opioids.

Number of responses: 17

I feel that certain opioids require counseling on naloxone more than others.

Number of responses: 17

I have had a difficult or challenging counseling experience related to naloxone.

Number of responses: 17

The experience in the previous question has affected my confidence in providing care to patients who may need naloxone.

Number of responses: 17

I think addiction is a moral failure.

Number of responses: 17

I feel that this intervention interferes with the doctor-patient relationship.

Number of responses: 17

Please share any other comments you have below:

Number of responses: 3

Text answers:

I believe Naloxone counseling is very important and can save many lives and I'm very glad to be part of that

I think it is important to talk to patients about naloxone, especially when they are taking or know someone that is taking an opiate. Some laws have changed to make it easier to dispense naloxone. I think the biggest barrier is the cost. Some insurances cover them, but a lot of people still have a high copay to purchase Narcan. I haven't had a bad interaction with people when recommending Narcan, but some patients just don't see the importance of having the medication around. I think that is where we can help the most. Emphasizing the importance of Narcan.

I think that the hardest thing about counseling/offering naloxone is patient receptiveness and figuring out how to offer it in a way that they are receptive to. Or maybe need a way to increase awareness/make it more normal to have if you are on pain medication so that its not just associated with "overdose" or "abuse"